

Commander-in-Chief's Message: New Directions

Greeting to all Companions!

Let me start by offering thanks to my predecessor, Michael T. Bates, for his able leadership. It's my pleasure to serve as the 66th Commander-in-Chief of our Order, and especially as we have some exciting changes afoot.

First: the Commandery-in-Chief has engaged a firm to design and build a new website for the Loyal Legion. The new platform will include several added features to allow broader and more timely communication. The website will feature a members-only, password-protected section that will provide forms, Commandery contact information, an online shop, and a calendar of important Loyal Legion and other relevant events. Other content will include biographies of past Commanders-in-Chief, list of Companions awarded the Medal of Honor, Original Companion information, past issues of the LLHJ, and much more. Junior Vice-CinC Jeff Lilly will continue to lead this effort. We expect to have the new site online this Spring. Stay tuned for more updates!

Second: as you are now seeing, the Trustees of the Loyal Legion Memorial Fund have made the decision to move our beloved Loyal Legion Historical Journal (LLHJ) to a fully-electronic format. This decision was not made lightly or in a vacuum. Printing and mailing costs are steadily rising, eating up an ever-greater portion of Fund assets. Future issues of the LLHJ will be distributed via email through the MOLLUS Constant Contact account, and also posted to our website. If desired, Companions will be able to easily download and print the current issue of the LLHJ in .pdf format from the Constant Contact email or the website. Ultimately, the Memorial Fund Trustees will be creating a more nimble, interactive publication, while being able to allocate cost savings to other worthwhile endeavors within its mission.

Loyally,
Paul T. Davis, Commander-in-Chief

Trustees' Corner

The Loyal Legion Memorial Fund's donation year is entering its second half. Companions have responded generously, but we have a way to go to meet our goal of $12,500 in annual gifts by September 30.

Thanks to your past support, the Memorial Fund continues its mission to underwrite publication of this Journal, to support worthy historical organizations, to assist planning of commemorative events, and to aid in our newest project: helping reimburse Commanderies and individuals for expenses in marking unmarked graves of Original Companions of our Order. You'll be receiving an email from the Fund's Trustees in the near future. Please respond generously and help the Memorial Fund carry out its important ends. (Gifts can be made anytime securely online here.)

Loyally,
The Trustees of the Loyal Legion Memorial Fund

The MOLLUS Meets: Philadelphia 2025 and Washington, D.C. 2026

The Loyal Legion, and the Dames of the Loyal Legion, held their annual business meetings at Philadelphia's Union League in October 2025. Paul T. Davis of Michigan assumed office as Commander-in-Chief of the MOLLUS, to be ably assisted by SVCinC Will Forbes of Pennsylvania and JVCinC Jeff Lilly of Indiana.

The annual banquet, in the impressive banquet hall of the armory of the First Troop Philadelphia City Cavalry, saw PCinC Michael Bates present the Daugherty-Thompson Cup to the Pennsylvania Commandery, recognizing the largest Commandery membership increase. Companions and guests enjoyed a tour of the First Troop's extensive collection of militaria.

In February, Lincoln birthday commemorations included a banquet and Capitol tour organized by the District of Columbia Commandery, under the leadership of Commander John D. Moore. The banquet on February 11 featured guest speaker John Reeves talking about his recent book, "Soldier of Destiny: Slavery, Secession, and the Redemption of Ulysses S. Grant." As usual, representatives of Lincoln Memorial University in Tennessee were on hand in tribute to their school's namesake.

The following day, Companions and Dames gathered at the Lincoln Memorial with many other lineage societies for the annual birthday commemoration. Mike Literst of the National Park Service, the Communications Chief of the National Mall and Memorial Parks, spoke about the renovations and construction taking place in the undercroft of the Memorial. PCinC James Simmons presented the James Alan Simmons History Award, named in memory of PCinC Simmons' father, to Katie Fultz of LMU.

INDIANA

After a busy 2025, the Indiana Commandery is well underway for an active year in 2026. The Commandery held its Winter meeting virtually on January 21 to discuss the upcoming calendar of events and activities.

On March 28, the Indiana Commandery dedicated a headstone for 1st Lt. Louis Reno Darragh, 140th Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry. Lieutenant Darragh was an Original Companion of the Colorado Commandery (Insignia #08188). His grave in Newark Cemetery in rural Greene County, Indiana had been unmarked since his death at age 61 in 1900, until a headstone was ordered and installed by Indiana Companions. Darragh's family has a long history of service to the nation: his father also served as a Civil War officer, and his great-grandfather, John Hart, was a signer of the Declaration of Independence. A large contingent of Companions, SUVCW and SVR Brothers, local veterans' organizations, and community members participated in the dedication event, which received local media attention.

Commandery members will gather in Terre Haute, Indiana on May 30 for their Spring meeting. On that day, the Commandery will again dedicate a headstone at the unmarked grave of an Original Companion: 1st Lt./RQM John G. Shryer (Insignia #13237, Indiana Commandery) of the 97th Indiana Infantry. Lt. Shryer died in 1904 and is buried in historic Woodlawn Cemetery. In addition to the marking ceremony, Indiana Companions will conduct their business meeting, enjoy a lunch at the Country Club of Terre Haute, and tour several historical sites of military significance in the Wabash River Valley. Contact Commander Jon Swartz for more information at jswartz82102@gmail.com.

TN SVC Mark Norris and PA Commander Austin Lamac present the TN Commandery check to Jason Kollrath of the Sultana Disaster Museum.

The Tennessee Commandery hosted “MOLLUS in Memphis” on November 7 and 8, 2025, to commemorate new grave markers for three Original Companions whose graves had never been marked.

Captain Haynes E. Hudson, 1st Missouri Engineers; Colonel James A. Swain, USV; and Lt. Col. William Hunter, 32nd Illinois Infantry are buried at historic Elmwood Cemetery in Memphis. The Commandery obtained government military headstones for each of them, based on the research of JVC-in-C Jefferson D. Lilly, who has researched and documented hundreds of Union officers who joined the Loyal Legion but are interred in unmarked graves.

Of particular note is Capt. Hudson, who after leaving the 1st Missouri Engineers in 1864, served in Memphis as a prosecutor and municipal judge before being appointed by President Ulysses Grant as United States Attorney for the Western District of Tennessee. He died in office in 1873 from cholera at age 35.

At the dedication event, present-day U.S. Attorney D. Michael Dunavant spoke to honor the memory of Capt. Hudson. His remarks are reprinted below.

Another initiative for the Commandery is supporting expansion of the Sultana Disaster Museum in Marion, Arkansas, near Memphis. The museum commemorates the greatest maritime disaster in United States history, in which 1,200 recently-released Union POWs died after their vessel, the steamer Sultana, sank in the Mississippi River on April 27, 1865. The Sultana, built to carry fewer than 400 passengers, was carrying 2,200 Union personnel when its boiler gave way.

The Museum recently acquired the 1939 Marion High School gymnasium and auditorium for expansion, and it is due to open later this year. In support of the Sultana Disaster Museum's $10 million capital campaign, the Commandery at its Fall 2025 meeting heard from Jerry Potter, member of the Museum Board and author of The Sultana Tragedy.

In January, Tennessee SVC Mark Norris delivered a Commandery check, and hosted Pennsylvania Commander Austin Lamac on a tour of the expansion. Commander Lamac donated a copy of Union Blue for the Sultana Museum's new library.

Tennessee: Hudson Remarks

Remarks as prepared for delivery

by U.S. Attorney D. Michael Dunavant

at the Military Order of the Loyal Legion of the United States (MOLLUS)

Fall 2025 Meeting & Grave Marking Ceremony

Elmwood Cemetery, Memphis, TN

November 7, 2025

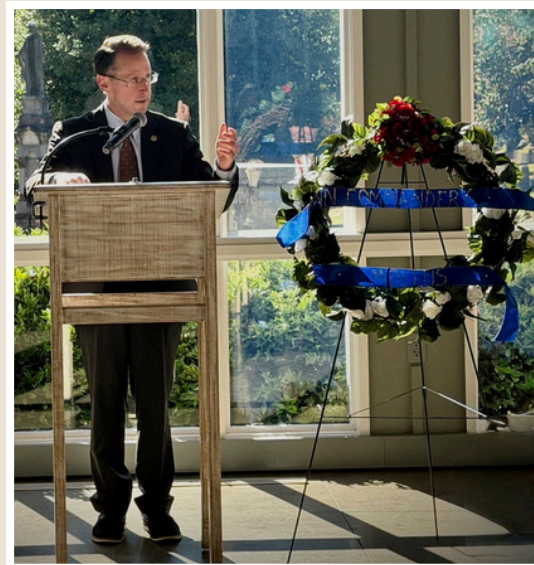

Thank you, Judge Norris for inviting me to attend and participate to honor the legacy and service of former U.S. Attorney and Judge Haynes E. Hudson. He had a remarkable legal and public service career until his death at only age 35.

We have a rich history of honorable and effective U.S. Attorneys who have served the Western District of Tennessee:

- Andrew Jackson was the 1st person to serve as U.S. Attorney by appointment of President Washington, from 1790 – when Tennessee was just a territory, until 1797, after we became the 16th state in the union. Of course, Andrew Jackson went on to be our 7th President.
- Mr. Hudson was the 18th person to serve as the U.S. Attorney, under the appointment of Ulysses S. Grant, who was also Hudson's prior Commanding General of the Union Army.
- And today, I have the honor of being both the 50th and 54th person to serve as U.S. Attorney, under the appointment of President Trump.

Think about the political and social dynamics of our nation during the service of Judge Hudson:

He had served as an officer in the Union Army, and settled back in Memphis after the Civil War in March, 1865. On U.S. Attorney D. Michael Dunavant speaks to ceremony guests at Elmwood Cemetery.

April 15, 1865, his Commander in Chief, President Lincoln was assassinated. During those turbulent times of reconstruction, at a relatively young age, he went on to serve as a City Prosecutor in Memphis, was elected Judge of the Criminal Court here, and then later served as U.S. Attorney. His appointment and service as the chief federal prosecutor coincided with the very beginning of the Department of Justice, the only federal agency with moral imperative in its very name – to do Justice. You see, the Justice Department didn't exist for nearly 100 years after America came into existence. The Justice Department came into existence on July 1, 1870. And it came into existence following a tremendous wave of violent behavior following the Civil War. And in many ways, the beginnings of the DOJ as an established federal agency began right here in Memphis.

There were riots in Memphis in 1866, with about four dozen people killed. And the tensions that were over whether or not African American, black Americans were going to have the liberties and freedoms that the Civil War had been fought to try and make possible. And less than 60 days later in New Orleans, Louisiana, both black Americans and people who were called White republicans at the time, we're marching together to make sure that people could recognize the rights of individuals, another four dozen people killed. And Ulysses S Grant, became the President of the United States starting in 1869, and he decided that it's important to secure the rights and liberties of people because there is an epidemic of violence that goes across the South as a result of the prevalence of the Ku Klux Klan. And he appoints an attorney general of the United States, who was an officer of a Confederate Army. A fellow named Amos Ackerman. And he becomes the Attorney General. And he begins a crusade to defend the liberties of citizens of the United States, against those who would seek to deprive them of those liberties with violent behavior that was designed to intimidate them. There were dozens and dozens of murders, and violent acts that included horrendous beatings and the like, designed to intimidate people, and to cause them to abandon the course that we had set for liberty for all Americans. And this is the situation which calls forth the Justice Department. It comes into existence to defend the liberties of American citizens, and absent its existence, those liberties were fast evaporating.

In 1870, the amount of litigation involving the post-Civil War United States necessitated the expensive retention of private attorneys, until Congress passed the Act to Establish the Department of Justice, led by the Attorney General, to handle the legal business of the United States. The Act gave the Department control over all federal law enforcement, and all criminal prosecutions and civil suits in which the United States had an interest. Of the many challenges facing a new Department of Justice and its first Attorney General, Amos Akerman, none was more prominent than assuring the civil and voting rights for African Americans during Reconstruction (1865-1877) in the former Confederate states. The adoption of the Thirteenth, Fourteenth, and Fifteenth Amendments to the Constitution extended civil and legal protections to former slaves and prohibited states from disenfranchising voters “on account of race, color, or previous condition of servitude.” President Ulysses S. Grant ordered that the new Department of Justice’s initial mandate was to counter and subdue those groups in the South who had been using intimidation and violence to oppose the Amendments. No other group was more dangerous than the Ku Klux Klan who often carried out lawless acts of violence and aggression, terrorizing African Americans for exercising their right to vote, running for public office, and serving on juries.

In response to the Ku Klux Klan’s acts of terror, Congress passed a series of Enforcement Acts in 1870 and 1871 to end such violence and empower the President to use whatever legal and military means necessary to protect African Americans. Amos Akerman would be Grant’s choice for his Attorney General to spearhead this enforcement. Amos T. Akerman—a former Confederate Army officer and unlikely choice to head up a new

Department of Justice tasked with overseeing Reconstruction--would ultimately prove one of the best choices Grant ever made for his cabinet and administration.

Both Attorney General Akerman and the first U.S. Solicitor General, Benjamin Bristow, used the new powers and resources of the Department of Justice to successfully prosecute Ku Klux Klan members in the early 1870s. In the first years of Grant's first term in office as President, there were over 1,000 indictments against Klan members with over 550 convictions won by new Department of Justice lawyers. By late 1871, there were more than 3,000 indictments and 600 more convictions. Due to the initial and highly successful efforts of the new Department of Justice, Attorney General Akerman, and U.S. Attorney Hudson, there was a dramatic decrease in violence in the South by the time Ackerman left office in 1872. This would prove to be just the beginning to a celebrated 150 years of federal law enforcement by the officials and employees of our Department of Justice.

The mission of strong and aggressive prosecution and protection of civil rights by the Department of Justice continues today, for the purpose of liberating people, so that they can live lives free from the course and impacts of destructive violence.

And so today, we remember the meeting of the Memphis Bench and Bar in June, 1873 to honor the death of Judge Hudson, and it was reported to be a "Sincere Tribute from Confederate Soldiers to the Worth of a Federal Official."

Those tributes included:

- "Upon his official life there is not a blemish, and his private and professional life was pure."
- "They referred in exalted terms to the kindness, the frankness and sincere brotherly feeling that marked the conduct of Judge Hudson when he met those from whom he had been separated by war and who were estranged by the difference of political sentiment."
- "They at once recognized the lofty character of the man by the fearless and conscientious manner in which he discharged the laborious duties of his position, and His administration was effective, just and impartial, knowing neither party nor sect in his honest endeavors to promote the public good, restore order, and maintain law for the protection of every citizen."

- "He became a terror at once to evil doers. Vice, and crime, and violence were repressed. life and property became once more safe and secure. Hope and confidence were again restored to Memphis, and new era of law and order arose."

We just recited the Pledge of Allegiance earlier – we said, "I pledge allegiance to the flag of the United States of America, and to the republic for which it stands. One nation under God. . ." WITH WHAT? With Liberty and Justice. These belong together. And when we sustain Liberty by imposing justice, we make a difference, just like Judge Hudson.

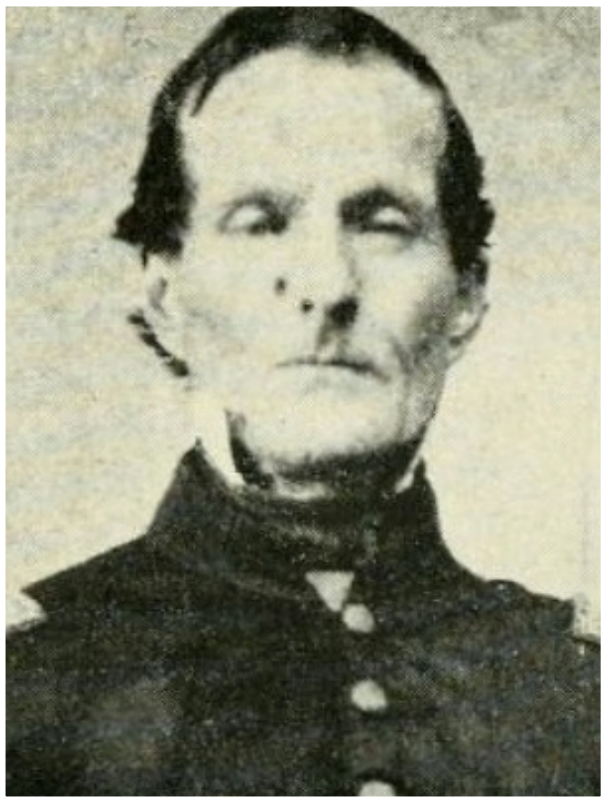

May we all rise to calling and service to Memphis that his memory and service exemplified.

Thank you.

Aged Warrior: James Wolf Crane of Illinois

By Harvey C. Hutchison, Ed.D. (CW4, USA, Ret.) — Companion 22971 (VA)

(Companion Hutchison is a great-great-grandson of Capt. Crane.)

Capt. Crane, about 1864.

In Freeport, Illinois, at the corner of Galena Avenue and Stephenson Street, stands an eighty-three-foot tall limestone obelisk memorial, designed by General Smith D. Atkins and erected in 1871. Bronze plaques at the base list the names of all of Stephenson County's Civil War veterans. James Wolf Crane, born during Thomas Jefferson's administration, appears twice as an officer in two different units, the 67th Illinois Infantry Regiment and the 46th Regiment, Illinois Veteran Volunteer Infantry.

James, a farmer before the Civil War, was born in Montgomery County, New York on 21 May 1808, the fifth of 13 children born to Caleb Camp Crane and Mary Polly Steele. He married Almira Lawson in 1827 in Amsterdam Village, New York. They eventually had five children, and moved with their growing brood to Stephenson County about 1840.

Despite his advanced age, James volunteered for service in the 67th Illinois Infantry Regiment, a three-months unit organized in June 1862 at Camp Douglas near Chicago. The 67th, along with four other similar units, were mustered in after an urgent call on the governors of States to send militia troops to Washington, as fear grew in May 1862 that a great enemy force was advancing on the capitol.

James was mustered as a Captain into Company "H" on June 13 1862. The feared threat to Washington had eased by then, and the 67th remained at Camp Douglas performing guard duty. James was mustered out in October 1862 along with all remaining Company members (six soldiers had been discharged early, and three had deserted).

James' return to civilian life was brief. In December 1863, at age 55, he again responded to the call of duty by joining the 46th Illinois Infantry Regiment as a Private in the "new" Company "D" (a replacement Company he helped raise). The 46th Illinois had been formed in December 1861, and had done good service at Shiloh and elsewhere. By January 1864 enough of its men had re-enlisted for the Regiment to retain its organization. That month it was designated a "Veteran Regiment", and James was commissioned Captain of the "new" Company "D". The Herkimer/Montgomery Counties (Illinois) Military Honor Roll of Honor states, based on excerpts from the "History of Company D, New Organization", that: "...He was probably the oldest man in his regiment to hold commission." It further adds that James "...was a man of strong convictions, honest and upright in his dealings with his comrades"; "...kind and generous to the comrades of his command and the whole regiment, and would rather suffer himself than wrong any one of the command..."; and, "Loyal and patriotic, he endured the hardships of a soldier's life at the age of 56 years, which in itself speaks more eloquently for this noble man than any eulogy pronounced by his friends."

During his time with Company "D", James saw considerable action. He participated in the Yazoo Expedition of May 1864; the Battle at Jackson Cross Roads, Mississippi in July 1864; and the siege of Fort Blakely, Alabama, in March 1865. He resigned his commission on 7 April 1865 and returned home, where he worked in the livery business.

James, a middle-aged veteran of two regiments, died in September 1873 from injuries caused by a runaway team of horses. He is buried in Freeport City Cemetery in Stephenson County.

Original Companion Unmarked Grave Registration Initiative

In January 2023, then-Registrar-in-Chief Jeff Lilly undertook a project to put into electronic format a list of all 14,000 Original Companions. That straightforward task turned into a years-long labor of love for him. Now Junior Vice-Commander-in-Chief, Lilly has located over 90% of those burial locations, as well as other vital information about them such as dates and locations of birth and death. This data will form the basis for a future membership management system.

While performing this research, Lilly noticed that there were Original Companions who were resting in verified unmarked graves. That struck a chord with him, and he created a sub-initiative to get those Union officers their just due. Despite being a work-in-progress, JVCinC Lilly has verified 152 Original Companions in unmarked graves across 27 states and 3 countries. There are likely many more yet to be verified. He was shocked by that number, but he also knew that the National Cemetery Administration within the Department of Veterans Affairs will create and ship a military headstone at no cost for unmarked Civil War veteran graves, upon receipt and verification of an application.

Given that there is a need and a VA program that will address that need, the Loyal Legion Memorial Fund agreed to begin an initiative that will provide applicant State Commanderies, or individuals or other groups as approved, with up to $200.00 in reimbursement for costs associated with placing a VA-supplied stone for a verified unmarked Original Companion. Even though the stone is provided at no charge, many times there are costs associated with receiving, setting, or perpetual care of the stone. The funds from the LLMF are designed to offset those expenses. The form is on the next page.

To date there have been five stones placed through this initiative – one in North Carolina, three in Tennessee (Hudson, Hunter, Swain), and one in Indiana. There will be two more placed in Indiana in 2026. If there are State Commanderies that have an interest in participating in the program, please contact JVCinC Lilly at jeffdilly@gmail.com.
